

Café la loop 86

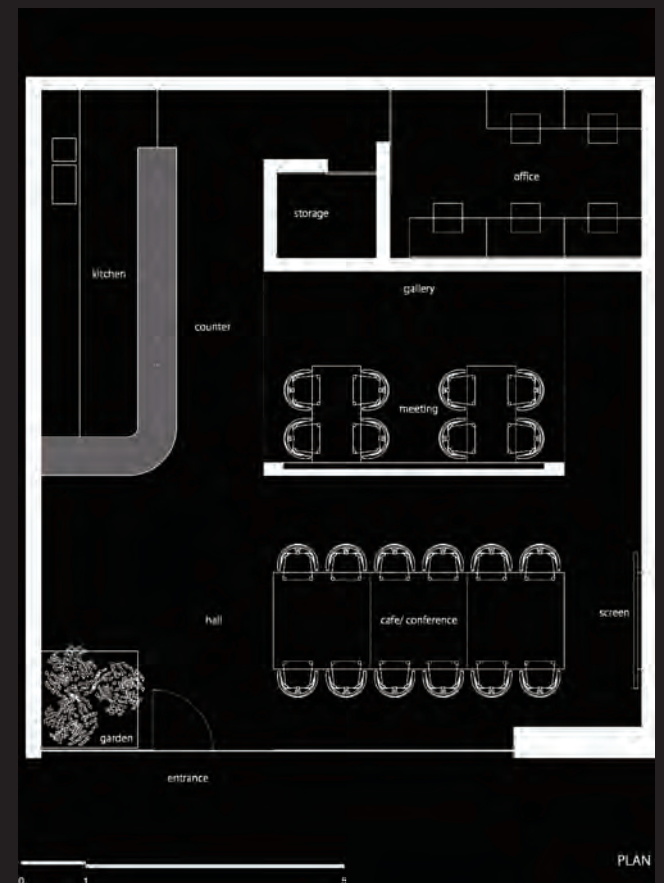

2018 / Shanghai, China

Jun Murata / JAM.

Café la loop 86 faces huge void space which has concrete columns that have supported the existing building. The glass of the facade has a gradation effect. The rectangular gallery in the center of the store introduces various services and activities of the owner company. Around the gallery, a cafe area counter screen office is located, and various activities are integrated. Cafes are used as seminars and showrooms as well as for general users. We expects that this space gives healing and rest to various people and it is used for multipurpose use.

View from the concourse

view from the hall

View of the counter

palette of monochrome and wooden texture

curved counter

View from the kitchen

Indirect lighting effects

view from the gallery

curved counter

view from the screen to the gallery view of from the entrance view of the gallery and cafe from the kitchen the counter is floating with indirect lighting effect

view from the inside

view from the inside

looking up the view from the office

cafe

view from the hall

view from the concourse