

中海国际中心
China Overseas International Center

THE OFFICE ZHONGHAI

The project is called Glass Stage. Designers hope creating a new office space, to influence people's behavior through space design, to pull more people to communicate and interact with each other. In the past, the conference room was a definition of closed, dark space. Today's conference room is not just a showcase for the stage, it's a collision of ideas, inspired by inspiration to let more people to join it. In this project, the designer tries to turn the meeting room into a transparent glass booth, the center position of the whole layout is to let more people participate in the ideas and thoughts, and drive the communication and interaction in the whole space. Also in the design of the water bar and independent meditation space. It is also the use of glass to make a line refraction, to display an open and independent discussion area, through the space of the field to drive the whole dynamic in office.

TRANSPARENT PLATFORM

Make the meeting room into a transparent glass booth and put it in the center of the whole layout. I hope more people can participate in the ideas and ideas, and promote the communication and interaction in the whole space.

■ BROKEN LINES

In the project of water table and independent space for meditation, use glass to make a line of refraction, to better show an open discussion and independence, through field space to drive the whole office

■ OFFICE

The project has a 360-degree panoramic view of the top floor of the super class office building in xintiandi, central Shanghai. Hope is to make a new landmark of the city.

